RECOMMEND $12,000,000 FOR STATE INSTITUTIONS

CONTROL BODY URGES SUM FOR NEW PROGRAM

Recommend $7,875,000

Cover Five Years
REQUEST NEW BUILDINGS
Would Erect Additions to Badger Institutions for State Charges

Madison—(P)—Recommendations that the state of Wisconsin spend $12,000,000 for upkeep of state institutions for the next biennium and for new hospitals, schools and correctional buildings, were made in the eighteenth biennial report of the state board of control to Governor John J. Blaine here Monday.

A building program of $7,875,000, to be carried out in five years, was advocated by the board which consists of John J. Hannan, Margaret Hutton Abels, and Grant C. Hass. The board recommended the following new buildings in connection with the treatment of mental cases:

Additions to the Mendota State hospital and the Northern hospital in Winnebago county, costing $1,200,000; a new million dollar hospital for the acutely insane; addition to the central state hospital for the insane costing $750,000; new training buildings at the Northern colony and training school costing $750,000, and new employees' quarters at state hospitals and feeble-minded colonies at the state public school at Sparta costing $200,000.

FINOWN NEEDS GREAT
"Without considering the possibility of prison expansion," the report said, "the known needs of the next decade are so great that they should not be passed over lightly at this time. These call for action."

FIND CATACOMBS OF EARLY CHRISTIANS AFTER LONG SEARCH

Smyrna, Asia Minor—(P)—Resumption of the excavations at Ephesus, interrupted for a number of years, has finally brought to light the long-sought catacombs of the early Christian martyrs, known as the "Seven Sleepers of Ephesus." The systematic search for pre-Christian antiquities in this part of the Asia Minor was taken up last fall by the Museum of Smyrna.

According to legend, seven Christian youths, about 250 A. D., hid themselves from pursuit in a cave. Their hiding place was discovered and the entrance blocked. The martyrs then fell asleep. Nearly 200 years later a herdsman discovered the cave and letting in light awoke the inmates. The emperor, Theodosius II, hearing of this phenomenon hastened to the spot in time to hear from the martyrs that God had wrought a miracle to confirm the belief in the resurrection of the dead. After having delivered their message the martyrs again fell asleep.

SHOE COMPANY WANTS TO MOVE FACTORY HERE

Call Meeting in City Hall to Discuss Proposal of Racine Company
The proposal of M. T. Shaw, Inc., shoe manufacturers now located at Racine, to move its factory to Appleton will be discussed at a meeting of the city council, chamber of commerce, luncheon clubs and other interested citizens with officials of the shoe company in the city hall Wednesday evening. The meeting is to start about 8 o'clock. Arrangements for the meeting are being made by the special council industrial committee appointed by Mayor A. C. Rule.

Mayor Rule said Monday morning that the committee had investigated twenty-five or thirty industries which contemplated seeking new quarters or were seeking places to locate and the Shaw company was deserving of the most consideration. He explained that all the stock in the company is held by four men and no stock can be purchased. The company is asking for a building with approximately 14,000 square feet of floor space and the expense of moving from Racine. The company wants to move from Racine to Appleton where labor conditions in the southern city.

FOUR STATES FACE FLOOD MENACE

TAX REFUND HOPES FADE IN CONGRESS

Expected Deluge of Letters and Telegrams Fails to Become Reality

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1926 by Post Pub. Co.
Washington—Dreams of tax reduction are fading. The expected deluge of letters and telegrams from the country as a whole has not materialized. And the Republican leaders are convinced that the Democrats will not get enough fame to attack to the petition recently circulated in order to bring about the discharge of the committee and the projection of a tax measure to a place on the house calendar.

A fairly heavy mail came at the outset of the session when tax reduction was being widely discussed but when the Republican majority conference decided against any tax legislation at this session, the letters dropped off. Since then the mail has been scattering. It comes mostly from manufacturers, chambers of commerce, corporations and associations who think the corporation tax of 13 1/2 per cent should be reduced at least to where it was the last session. These letters are clamoring for a repeal of an increase rather than any decrease beyond what was paid a year ago.

NO ALTERATION
Every letter that reaches the ways and means committee is being answered to the effect that the decision has been made and will not be altered. If, of course, there were a large number of letters and the demand seemed to be widespread there might be a different reply.

Two things are being inferred from the scattering number of letters regarding the tax reduction. One is that the small tax payer realizes that the amount of reduction he can get is relatively small and the other is that the people who really want tax reduction have failed to express themselves. There is the possibility that reliance has been placed on the theory that the Democrats by some parliamentary maneuver will be able to compel consideration of tax revision. The Democrats cannot do anything unless they get a majority in the house and this seems unlikely as their efforts to get Republican votes thus far have not proved successful.

DISCHARGED EMPLOYEE SETS HOSPITAL AFIRE

Milwaukee—(P)—A fire, started by a disgruntled employee, endangered the lives of 80 patients of Columbia hospital. There was no acute danger from fire for the building is of fireproof construction, but members of the hospital staff were fearful of a panic which might have been disastrous. Order was kept and most of the patients were unaware of the danger. John Bonion, who worked at the hospital until a few days ago when he was discharged, started the fire for revenge, he confessed to police, because he thought he had been unfairly treated.

BELIEVE MAN SLAIN IN LIQUOR QUARREL

Detroit, Mich.—(P)—The victim of a liquor feud found slain in his apartment early Sunday was identified by police Monday as John H. Reid, one of the most notorious characters of Detroit's underworld. While Reid's body was found in his apartment, a trail of blood leading from the room to his automobile, parked in the rear of the building, convinced police he had been shot as he sat in the machine and then dragged into his room.

Scores Die As Cold Wave Grips European Nations

Weather Spellbound by Sub-zero Temperature

Paris—(P)—Christmas brought dead winter to Western Europe. Carol's Latest Romance Ended, Friends Report

Paris—(P)—Magda Lupescu, au-burn-haired beauty for whom Crown Prince Carol of Rumania, renounced his right of succession to the throne, has apparently passed out of his life. Those credited with knowing his affairs say the romance which began with the flight of the couple from Rumania a year ago has ended. The former crown prince—now plain Carol Casarman—has left his Neully villa and is believed to be somewhere on the Riviera, leaving his charming companion behind. Carol's departure gave rise to the report that he was on his way back to Rumania but this is not given credence in view of King Ferdinand's recovery, the return of Queen Marie from her American trip and the reiterated assertions from Bucharest that Carol's uninvited re-appearance there would only cause complications.

Dry Shoes On Dead Man's Feet Aid Uncover Murder

Chicago—(P)—Dry shoes on a dead man's feet were the clue that turned to justice the slayer of William Lindstrom, radio cabinet-maker. Loren Patrick, who confessed killing Lindstrom Dec. 6 "as a favor" for Mrs. Lillian Fraser, a friend who got me out of jail," continued nonchalant in his attitude toward the affair. The clubbing to death of Patrick weighed so little on his conscience, he told police, that he scarcely gave it a thought save to keep out of the way of the officers.

LEADERS SEE NO BREAKERS IN 12 MONTHS

Government Has Given Business Good Break, Industrialists Say

SEE MANY OPPORTUNITIES Gary Says It Will Be Businessmen's Fault if They Don't Succeed

New York—(P)—Beacons in the banking and industrial world point a fair-weather course for the Good Ship Business in 1927. Forecasts of optimism tempered with notes of conservatism, were available Monday in statements on the outlook for next year's business from heads of railroads, banks and industrial corporations. The navigable seas of commerce, are not threatened by dire storms as far as can be seen, the prognosticators say. High pinnacles of prediction follow:

James Simpson, President of Marshall Field and Co.—In my opinion business will continue during the next six months substantially on the level of 1926. Business and government have been conservatively, although progressively administered during the past year and fundamental conditions are left in good balance, auguring well for the period immediately ahead.

Merchandising activity generally has been successful. Elbert H. Gary, chairman U. S. Steel Corporation—If business shall be seriously diminished during the coming year it will be the fault of ourselves, and not the fault of natural conditions or the lack of consideration and fundamental conditions are left in good balance, auguring well for the period immediately ahead.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors Corporation said it now seems reasonable to expect that the 1927 production of automobiles will equal if it does not exceed the previous four year average. He predicted that 1927 will be a good and satisfactory year for the automobile industry.

Patrick E. Crowley, president of the New York Central lines, says indications are that 1927 will be a year that might be termed generally satisfactory as far as the railroads are concerned in that the prospects for the volume of traffic do not at this time present any unusual outlook.

NEW CLEWS FOUND IN HOUCK MYSTERY

Arkansas Police Report Seeing Woman Who Answers Description

Washington, D. C.—(P)—District of Columbia police are hopeful Monday they had a new clue which might lead to a solution of the "mysterious disappearance" nearly two weeks ago of Mrs. Gladys W. Houck, wife of Dr. Knute Houck, the St. Elizabeth's hospital psychiatrist, who is being held for observation of his own mental condition in the Gallinger municipal hospital.

They were not, however, convinced for they have become more and more skeptical as to the value of clue as more than a week of work has proved fruitless in determining whether Mrs. Houck was killed, committed suicide or ran away. The new clue came in the form of a telegram from S. T. Hardin, chief of police at Ellythville, Ark., which read:

"Woman passed through here Dec. 23, enroute from Cairo, Ill., to Springfield, Mo. Have the helpful men who positively identified her as Gladys W. Houck after seeing press pictures carrying one black grip with Washington letter headasher tag."

LAWRENCE FROSH ABOVE AVERAGE; TESTS INDICATE

Lawrence Students Receive Higher Scores Than Those at Iowa

Lawrence college freshmen are above the established by standard content and comprehension tests, according to the results recently announced by a committee of the faculty at the college which was appointed to give examinations to the incoming class at the beginning of the fall term. The forms of standards for comparison were based on the results of the tests given to groups of 1,050 and 1,237 freshmen, respectively, at the University of Iowa in 1925.

The Iowa content examination Form A-1 was composed of four parts: English and literature, mathematics, science and history and social sciences. Iowa comprehension test is a reading examination based on representative selections from the fields of history, literature and science. It serves as a fairly reliable index, the committee believed, of the student's ability to study, that is to get knowledge from the printed page. All of these tests have time limits and are only measures of capacity for study or achievement in a given length of time.

Scores of the lowest groups at Lawrence were significantly higher than at the Iowa institution. This was no doubt due, the committee explained, to the Lawrence college rule that the lowest fourth of the high school graduating classes are not admitted.

"The middle score for 2,013 high school students based on the returns from 25 Iowa high schools is 106, as compared with 110 for college freshmen," it was said. Thus the college students had a score only four points higher than the high school, which would seem to indicate that college freshmen are not much more than a selected group than high school seniors. This is in full accord with the findings of Dr. Book in his study of Indiana high school and college students several years ago, the committee continued.

Results of the Lawrence freshmen indicated that a consistently higher grade was made in each group than those of the standard norms in the content tests. The students were classified in nine groups, according to the scores made, for purposes of comparison. The tenth making the lowest average was placed in the first percentile, the lowest 20 per cent in the second percentile, etc. Thus the lowest 10 per cent of the Iowa freshmen scored 68 or less on the test, while the lowest 10 per cent of the Lawrence freshmen scored 78 or less.

Other total scores were: Second 10 per cent, Iowa, 82 and Lawrence 91; third, Iowa, 81 and Lawrence, 90; fourth, Iowa, 100 and Lawrence 106; fifth, Iowa, 91 and Lawrence, 98; sixth, Iowa, 118 and Lawrence, 124; seventh, Iowa, 128 and Lawrence, 134; eighth, Iowa, 141 and Lawrence, 142; ninth, Iowa, 158 and Lawrence 153.

In the Iowa comprehension test form D-1, the total scores were based on norms established by the grades of 1,227 freshmen at the University of Iowa. The same significant fact that the higher scores are found for the lower percentiles in the Lawrence students. In the two upper groups, the norms were higher than the scores of the local students.

Scores in these tests were: First, Iowa, 12.1 and Lawrence, 15.2; second, Iowa, 15.3 and Lawrence, 18; third, Iowa, 17.7 and Lawrence, 20.2; fourth, Iowa, 19.9 and Lawrence 22.6; fifth, Iowa, 22 and Lawrence 23.7; sixth, Iowa, 24.2 and Lawrence, 25.6; seventh, Iowa, 26.4 and Lawrence 27.1; eighth, Iowa, 28.3 and Lawrence 28.7; ninth, Iowa, 32.2 and Lawrence, 31.8.

Students with low scores do not necessarily fail to make good at college, especially if they are determined and industrious, it was said. Conversely, students with high scores do not get along well necessarily, if they fail to apply themselves. A high score test is indicative of ability but is not a guarantee of a high grade of performance in college work.

Members of the Lawrence committee were: Prof. J. H. Griffiths, chairman, and R. B. Thiel, Prof. James L. Mursell, and Everett Hall.

CELEBRATORS QUIET ON CHRISTMAS EVE

Christmas eve passed off quietly in Appleton, the "blotter" at the police station indicates.

The occasion evidently was observed by quiet Yule celebrations at home and attendance at church services. Not a single drunk was arrested that night, and only one person became embroiled in the clutches of the law. He was Arthur Knudsen, 525 E. Winnebago-st., and the charge which precipitated his lodgement in the police station was disorderly conduct. He was arrested shortly after 11 o'clock Friday night on E. College-ave.

CHRISTMAS WAS LONELY DAY FOR THIS WANDERER

At least one person in Appleton spent a lonely, desolate Christmas.

The day was just like all other days to him. He doubt it was even less cheerful than many he has experienced in the past. Whether he is absolutely devoid of all sentiment, whether his family ties are entirely severed or merely temporarily parted, or whether fate just dealt harshly with him during the past few months, is not known. Suffice it to say, Christmas was not a gala occasion for him.

Instead of joining his family and making merry, he called at police headquarters early Christmas eve and applied for a night's lodging. His request of course was granted. He was the only wanderer to spend the night there, and he was sent on his way Christmas morning after he had been given a hearty breakfast. The well wishes of the department, and the hopes that life would smile more kindly on him in the future, went with him.

TRAIN STRIKES CAR, BUT OWNER IS GONE

An extra North Western train, No. 1123, southbound, struck a Ford coupe about 2:25 Christmas morning at the W. Prospect-ave crossing, but whether anyone was injured has not been determined by police. Even the owner of the car has not been discovered.

The car, headed east, was only slightly damaged, the left front wheel being broken off and glass in one door being shattered. No one was around when police arrived on the scene a few minutes later, and the car still is lying along the railroad tracks.

The license number of the vehicle is B49-138, but the person to whom this license was issued had disposed of the machine, and police are unable to ascertain who the present owner is. If anyone was injured, their hurts are not serious, police believe. The train was in charge of Conductor Ferguson. The engineer was named Thayer.

H. L. Plummer spent Christmas at Waupun.

Harold Jens of Waterloo, Ia., spent Christmas with his parents, Mr. and H. C. Jens, 313 W. Winnebago-st.

Another Effort To Better Serve Our Patrons

Inviting Public Criticism

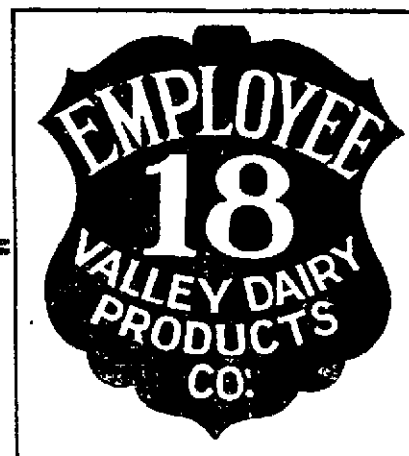

THE three principal factors that govern the success of a business are—THE QUALITY OF THE PRODUCTS—THE PRICE OF THE PRODUCTS—and THE SERVICE OF THE COMPANY. Countless dollars and untiring effort have brought VALDAIR MILK & CREAM to a point where it is now the finest that can be had for the money. The thousands of dollars that have been spent for pasteurizing machinery and other modern sanitation equipment have not been spent in vain. Now we are turning our greatest efforts toward the improvement of our already fine service.

You Can Help Us Improve Our Service. We Will Thank You For Phoning 2930

AFTER all, the service that a concern renders to the public can be judged only by the public. That is why we are asking the help of these people, our patrons. If our service does not please you in every detail it does not satisfy us—because, the sole purpose of this service is to please our patrons and if it fails in this respect it has missed its point. As this service is intended only to please, we are asking your help in perfecting it. Often times we may overlook opportunities of better serving you—this is unintentional on our part, and if you would only call us, every effort would be made to correct this oversight.

You Can Tell Our Employees By Their Service Badges

TO the right you will find a list of instructions that are given to our employees. Each and every employee of the Valley Dairy Products Co. is given a badge, prominently displayed on this badge is a number by which he may be identified. When he is given this badge, he is given in printed form this company's idea of the service that all employees must extend to its patrons. If he can suggest improvements of this service he is encouraged to do so and rewarded for it—if he fails to give the utmost in service we want to know about it. All of our employees have heartily endorsed this movement.

Do not argue with customers. Report all misunderstandings to the office and let them be handled from that source.

Deliver all milk to the exact place designated by the customers.

Arrange your deliveries so that you will arrive at your customers as near the time that they request as possible.

Comply with all traffic regulations. Give the other fellow the right of way.

COURT REFUSES TO FREE WISNEFSKI FROM WORKHOUSE

Menasha Man Will Appeal to Supreme Court to Win His Release

Menasha—Attorney Hugo Keller of Appleton, representing Andrew Wisnefski of Menasha in an action to obtain a writ of habeas corpus for the latter's release from the county workhouse where he is serving six months for possession and manufacture of moonshine, announced in county court at Oshkosh he would appeal Wisnefski's case to the supreme court of the state when Judge D. E. McDonald refused the writ.

Mr. Keller based his claim for the prisoner's release on the assertion that the search warrant on which the raid was made at the Wisnefski house Oct. 3 was illegal. Justice H. L. Luckenbach of Menasha testified he had not sworn Perry L. Wolf to whom the warrant was issued. Walter Scherck of Appleton who was with Wolf testified that Wolf was not sworn.

After Mr. Keller had completed his case Mr. Allen attempted to show that Mr. Scherck was prejudiced in that he had cause for enmity against Wolf since the episode of October. This line of attack was stopped by objections which were sustained by the court.

Mr. Allen then made a motion to quash the writ on the ground that the commitment was made by a competent court and that Mr. Keller's argument in attacking the municipal court because of a former action at the justice court in Menasha was null and void.

Mr. Keller replied by affirming that the only question involved was whether Justice Luckenbach had proper jurisdiction. He asserted that the fact that the search warrant was illegal made void the entire proceedings from that point forward.

Judge McDonald, in making his decision, replied that Mr. Keller's contentions made no complaint of the court by which the commitment of Wisnefski was issued. He said Wisnefski's plea of guilty there to a proper criminal warrant and complaint, together with the information, was sufficient to make his imprisonment legal, regardless of what may have been the proceeding in the lower court.

If the defendant was at that time aware of the charge to which he was pleading guilty and understood the case as it was then presented, he cannot be taken to make his imprisonment by any action to prove the mistake alleged to have been made in the justice court, the judge said.

BARBERS CONSIDER EDUCATIONAL TEST TO GET LICENSE

Masters Association Studies Proposal to Require Minimum Schooling

Madison—(CP)—Keeping step with the refinement in barber shops, the sequel to bobbed hair and boyish clips, Wisconsin barbers may require educational standards before licenses are issued.

A recommendation made at the recent convention of the National Master Barbers' association that a minimum schooling of eight years in the grades be required is now under consideration by the Wisconsin branch of the association. In case favorable action is taken by the association, it was said, a bill will probably be formulated for presentation before the coming session of the legislature.

Although state departments take no part in authorship of bills, C. A. Mullen of the state health department, said that the proposed measure was being discussed by representatives and officers of the Wisconsin Master Barbers' association, an organization composed of barber shop proprietors. The proposed bill would have to receive the consideration of the Journeymen Barbers' association, it was said, in order to insure passage. The latter organization is composed of the employees.

L. A. Holzhauser of Milwaukee, president of the Masters' association, has conferred with other association members regarding the advisability of such action. M. W. Whitaker, secretary of the Journeymen's association, has also had the matter under consideration, it was said.

At present there is no educational standard required of barbers, according to Mr. Mullen, although the license is not granted until skill in the trade is exhibited by the applicant. However, if the grade school requirement is made compulsory by the legislature an improved standard in the trade will result, according to association members.

The national association asked each state to consider the proposal as recommended

CHAPTER XLVIII

With dazed, unbelieving eyes, Judith looked down from the table at the sprawling body, of the dean. He lay lumpsily against the table leg, feebly striking out with arms and feet. Incoherent cries filled the room, and the girl who had shrieked cried aloud again.

Standing over him was the man who had knocked him down. He was just straightening gray tweed shoulders from the blow.

"Great gods, the professor!" yelled Will Wetherell from his corner by the door.

Dr. Dorn paid no heed. With a long arm, he swept Judith out of the table, so that she lay against his shoulder as limply as a child. Then, avoiding the body of the dean, he strode with her in his arms toward the door. The crowd fell back before him, and Judith caught a glimpse of Eric's bewildered face before they passed through the door into the darkness of the portico.

The professor walked unhurriedly to his car and placed her in the front seat. Then he walked around and got in beside her. Judith held her breath and felt the throbbing in her temples.

The silence between them grew heavier as they rode. Judith huddled in her corner of the seat, drawing tightly about her the robe that he had tossed across her knees. The professor gripped the wheel and watched the road and drove. He did not look at her.

They passed the dark fraternity houses, the sunken garden of the campus, the black bulk of the adjoined College road, and the professional building.

A cat ran across their path as they saw the car sharply to avoid striking it, so that Judith was flung violently against him. He neither spoke nor looked at her.

In front of the Stedway house he stopped and helped her out. They went up the steps side by side, like two tongue-tied walkers in a nightmare.

"Haven't any key," he said at last. "It's in my coat pocket, back at the frat house."

Silently, he rang the doorbell and stood beside her. At length they heard heavy footsteps inside and a voice crying "Wait a minute."

The professor handed her to the doorway, and, bowing, left her. Judith stumbled into the arms of the bulky Mrs. Stedway and, extricating herself, ran up the stairs, as the last strands of control broke and let the sobs burst through. A special delivery letter stood against a perfume bottle on the dresser, but after a hurried glance at the envelope, Judith left it alone.

She rose from a tumbled bed an hour later, her body still shaken by dry sobs. The jade dress had been crushed in a mass of wrinkles and one satin slipper lay disconsolately by the bed.

She went to the closet and pulled from its dark recesses her wardrobe trunk and suitcase. Then she dragged all her clothes from the hangers, and, jerking, out the drawers of the dresser, dumped their contents on the bed.

Working in feverish haste and as quietly as possible, she packed the trunk and grip. It took a few minutes of pulling to close the lid of each. There remained the stacks of books ranged on the table and she stood looking at them for a moment. The jade dress clung about her now, limp and soiled from the packing. Her hair had fallen about her face and one chiffon stocking had ripped against the trunk edge.

She glanced around the room. It was stripped of pictures, of cretonne curtains, of all signs of her occupancy. On the dressing table were left only the articles necessary for her morning toilet.

Only the desk and table bore signs of her life in Pendleton. She rushed upon them and with two sweeps of her hand, brushed books and paper into a heap on the floor.

From inside the suitcase, the faint tick of the little dressing table clock went on. After midnight the winds blew and the blinds flapped.

At five a faint pink light in the east spread to encompass Pendleton. The sun came up and pried with fingers of light at Judith's window panes. But the blinds were drawn, and inside, the electric bulbs held their own against the daylight.

Judith, still in forlorn jade silk, stirred from her position across the tumbled bed. She opened heavy eyes and, catching the glare of electricity in them, dropped the lids again. The little clock in the suit case feebly struck one bell for six-thirty. There were no movements in the house.

At last the girl on the bed sat up, shading her eyes with her hand. "A glance at her watch brought her to her feet."

The mirror gave back a sorry spectacle. After one look at it, Judith tore off the ruined jade dress, and handling it as though it were the tangible memory of the night before, leaned over the waste basket by the dresser to stuff it in.

Leading over the basket, she paused: The special delivery letter that she had ignored the night before lay placidly, still unopened, in the basket. It had apparently slipped off the dressing table during Judith's hasty packing.

The jade dress dropped to the floor as she picked up the letter. It was postmarked "Pendleton." The handwriting of the address was not readily familiar. She laid it aside while she put on her traveling dress.

Then, with the letter in her hand Judith consulted the time table and crept downstairs. While the telephone operator was ringing her number, Judith awkwardly tore open the letter and began to read.

"Dear Judith:—You'll know why I've done this, though nobody else does—and you'll be glad, I hope."

"I've left. I'm going to be happy. He can't reach us. When he first learns I'm not visiting my people, we'll be well on our way to South America. My dearest has a mining concession there."

"I'll never see Pendleton again—thank God. And I'll never see the dean again."

"I'm afraid this is goodbye to you too, Judith. I'm sorry for that. You've done your best to help me. Though we don't see each other again, I'll not forget."

"College Transfer Company," said a brusque voice in Judith's ear.

She stammered in bewilderment a moment, then, recalling what she wished to say, gave her orders.

"O. K.," said the man on the wire "seven-forty-five."

She read the rest of the letter leaning against the telephone.

"You must have thought me terribly ungrateful of late. There was something I wanted, yet was afraid to tell you. Once when you came to see me, I dared not let you in, for I knew I'd tell you everything. The dean came home that day and saw you. He hates you, Judith."

"I'd forced him to stop persecuting you, and he knew there was some bond between us. Finally he couldn't stand it. That day I saw you near the house, he told me if he ever saw us together, he'd discharge you out of hand."

"In a way, I was glad to be cut off from you. I knew I would tell you—that I did not dare to tell you, if we continued our intimacy."

"I killed 'Kitty' Shea, Judith. I'm not sorry—but sometimes I've been afraid. And when Eric Waters was accused—I nearly went mad. That's why I got him out of jail."

"He needed killing, and I'm glad I did it, though I did it, though I didn't really mean to. He forced me into his car and was threatening to go to the dean if I didn't find more money for him."

"Out on the Middleburg road, he reached to touch me, and I pushed him and jumped out. I guess the wheel spun around, for the car went slithering off over the muddy bank and I stood in the road, trembling. I didn't go for help. I just tramped back to town."

"I'm not sorry. But I'm writing this so that if Eric is ever accused again, you'll have this letter. I'll be too far away to suffer from it. Thank you, Judith and goodbye."

The letter was signed "Prudence Wheeler Brown."

Judith was still staring at the name when someone bounded up the porch steps. To prevent a ringing of the bell that would arouse the house she opened the door herself. Eric stood before her. He came into the hall eagerly. "Jude, I've come at the first possible moment. I didn't want to cause a row by following you last night in the wee small hours.

"Frightful mess that, last night. But your triumph was worth it, to me at least. We'll go off and get married to day and neither of us will ever see Pendleton again—rotten hole. Get your things, Buttercup."

He took a step toward her. "Damn nervy for that big schoolteacher stiff to interfere. I was just getting ready to sock old Brown myself when he stepped in. Guess I can take care of my own girls." He moved nearer.

But Judith's laughter stopped him. "Can you, indeed?" She glanced at the letter in her hand. "You've never done it. Why?" she giggled hysterically, "you didn't even kill Shea for me!"

Eric looked at her in blank amazement. But someone else was coming up on the porch. They had left the door open, and Dr. Dorn walked in, unannounced.

He looked at Eric blankly, as though he did not recognize him, then turned to Judith, as if they two had been alone. "I've come to say goodbye and ask your pardon, Judith. I'm sorry I intruded upon your affairs

—it seems as though I've only tangled them the more."

"Last night was horrible. But it's over, and it's the end. I'll be running away from that night and all the other wretched memories of Pendleton, as long as I live, I guess."

Judith was looking at him as though mesmerized. She made a helpless little gesture with her hands, but the professor did not heed it.

"Where?" she began, but could not finish.

"I'm talking a post as research astronomer at the Yerkes observatory. It's been offered to me several times.

But I couldn't make up my mind to leave—you. It doesn't matter now."

He was turning toward the door, followed by Eric's sardonic gaze.

"Wait!" Judith was running up the stairs in a moment she came flying down again, wearing hat and coat and carrying a traveling bag in either hand.

Eric stepped forward, but she walked up to the professor. "Do you s'pose," she said, with a slow smile, "do you s'pose I could dust off the telescope for you, or polish the stars—or something?"

Her meaning dawned upon him slowly. "Judith!" he cried, reaching both arms for her.

But she laughed softly and put the bags in his hands.

Eric, watching on the door, saw the rattletrap touring car turn the corner and vanish in a cloud of dust.

"Well, I'll be damned," said Eric. Someone was laughing softly behind him. He turned. It was Myra.

BLAINE AND MACGREGOR

Governor Blaine in a letter to President Glenn Frank of the university of Wisconsin says the tax catechism prepared by Ford H. MacGregor, associate professor of political science of the university, as secretary of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities and in behalf of that organization, is filled with lies, half-truths and misstatements. It is a strong and acrimonious letter to come from a governor. It betrays on its face feeling and resentment, whereas it seems to us it could with better grace have dealt with the subject in a calm and dispassionate manner. Mr. MacGregor's catechism was a temperate discussion of Wisconsin's tax history, coupled with a well-reasoned analysis of the tendencies and effects of the system. It may not have met with the governor's approval, or it may not have coincided with his ideas as to what our tax policy should be, but in either event a comment couched in dignified terms would have been more becoming his excellency.

We think in fairness to Mr. MacGregor it is incumbent upon the governor to specify wherein the catechism is untrue and misleading. The public has a right to this information, and only in the light of it can an intelligent judgment be passed on the issue created by Mr. Blaine. So far as the propriety of Mr. MacGregor's act is concerned, he undoubtedly was within his right as a citizen to serve with the League of Municipalities as its secretary and to prepare for it a statement of its views on taxation. It can have no relation to his fitness or competency as a university professor. To deny him the right would be altogether in violation of that freedom and independence which is guaranteed to every citizen, and which is an important part of Mr. Blaine's political creed. Yet we take it from the tone of his letter that the governor is of contrary opinion, and believes that punishment ought to be meted out to Mr. MacGregor by the university authorities. Possibly he may even seek his removal. It seems to us there is only one thing that President Frank and the board of regents can do, and that is to refuse to construe Mr. MacGregor's course as improper or derogatory to the interests of the university. Taxation is an economic as well as a political problem, and it is evident from the catechism that Mr. MacGregor was treating it from the former standpoint.

Nothing is to be gained toward a just and rational solution of the tax problem by trying to make it serve political ends, and that, it is evident, both the present and preceding state administrations have sought to do. In the meantime, it is up to Governor Blaine in simple justice to make specific the allegations of untruthfulness against Professor MacGregor.

JUSTICE IN OHIO

A Canton jury has vindicated justice by promptly returning a verdict of guilty against Patrick E. McDermott for the foul murder of Don R. Mellett, editor of the Canton Daily News, who was assassinated for engaging in an anti-vice crusade. The evidence was entirely convincing. Two others of the conspirators now go to trial for their lives, and all those in the ring who plotted the assassination have not been apprehended. The security of life in Ohio, as well as in other states, demands that this dastardly crime be punished to the full extent of the law. It is a contest between the underworld and organized society. In too many cities the underworld is in the supremacy. It needs to be taken in hand, otherwise gangsters will soon be shooting down with impunity men commissioned to uphold law and order and those who are so foolhardy as to back them up. It is government and society that are on trial rather than assassins.

THE LATEST "SCANDAL"

So far as public opinion may be measured up to date, Judge Landis' action in breaking a "scandal" over the heads of Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker is a boomerang. The fans are almost a unit in ridiculing the czar out of court. Augusta wants to run Cobb for mayor, and his townsman gave him a reception when he returned from the "trial" at Chicago that must have reverberated in the ears of the redoubtable judge. The public thinks it is a peanut case, and it would be a peanut scandal if it did not touch even remotely the honor of two of the most popular players that ever wielded a bat.

For ourselves, we fail to see evidence on which to convict either Cobb or Speaker of anything, aside from the implication of misimpropriety. Cobb's letter is the whole case, and he has explained that satisfactorily. Leonard's story is not to be accepted without more convincing evidence. Look out for the testimony of a sorehead! Then too, it is ancient history. It appears from a distance as though Judge Landis had exploded a paper bag.

IN WHICH WE CORRECT

In these columns under date of December 8th was published an editorial taking Congressman Frear of Wisconsin to task in his alleged policy antagonistic to the demands of military experts for defense. The editorial was based upon a news article appearing in one of the metropolitan papers.

We are in receipt of a communication from Mr. Frear in which he denies going counter to expert advice concerning the needs of the country in the way of preparedness, and we make haste to write this because we are not only willing but always anxious to correct any error that may creep into these columns and particularly towards one who has been in the public service as long as Mr. Frear. Mr. Frear in his communication says:

The committee informs me that $40,533,394 is the amount recommended for the next aircraft bill to be presented to congress. This amount I understand is nearly twenty times the appropriation for the same purpose made ten years ago and $6,070,612 more than the amount appropriated last year. . . . Our military and naval appropriations in these days of peace reach about double the annual appropriations made before the war. . . . Chairman Butler of the naval committee has just asked for over $100,000,000 additional this year for ten new cruisers to meet the English and Japan naval building program. I have talked with him at length and believe he is right in this demand. Nearly one billion dollars for the navy and naval appropriations bills in one for the other is a program for this year, whereas about $350,000,000 was the average figure sent before the last war for all naval and military purposes. This is certainly not an insignificant amount for propagandists who are often the first to cry against burdening taxpayers, and this is only one of the many measures that bring a stack of letters and telegrams to the average member's desk every day from . . . propagandists.

We agree with Mr. Frear that these proposed appropriations appear to be ample to cover our military necessities. The amount to be spent either for the navy or for aircraft depends upon the advice of experts on whose judgment the government and congress may rely. However, their recommendations are apt to be over rather than understated. Preparedness is a flexible term. For the most part, we would prefer to subscribe to Mr. Frear's opinions so far on the question of naval and aircraft appropriations, and we trust that this editorial explanation will repair any injustice which may have been done him by the previous editorial.

Just Folks

MUST
Must is a tyrant, not famed for his beauty,
A slave driver doing the bidding of duty.
When pleasure is calling us out of the doorway Must shouts in our ears: "You go my way, not your way!"
There's never much merriment found when he's present
For Must has a way that is always unpleasant.

To see him and hear him you'd get the opinion
That Must is supreme in this worldly dominion.
He jabs us and stabs us and pricks us to labor,
Insists that we play the true friend or the neighbor.
But the fact is there's nothing but blustering to it.
He shows us our job, but he can't make us do it.

Must shouts: "Do your duty and give up that pleasure!"
Tomorrow perhaps you may dance at your leisure,
And some of us whisper and some of us grumble,
But most of us know that this tyrant is humble.
He would like to be boss, but his orders are hazy.
He can't make us work if we choose to be lazy.

But follow Must's bidding and stop when he's stay
you,
That tyrant with honor and joy will repay you.
He'll reward you with peace and with love beyond measure.

And pride never found by the seekers of pleasure, Must is rksome and out on rough journeys he'll take you,
But go with him, boy, and a man he will make you!

COMING BACK SOME WALK AND SOME SKIP

The proprietor of the beauty shop who stored her flivver and walked to business all winter (perhaps six miles a day) reducing about twenty-five pounds, as she avers, has traded the old car in on a nifty new one, and now she wants to reduce another 10 pounds. You see how this deplorable habit grows on a woman once she tries it. But I doubt twice about this: first, whether any further reduction of weight would be good for either health or appearance, and second, whether any further reduction is likely, now that the new chariot is in commission. This beautician (is that the right word?) reports that she is now doing 30 feet of somersaults every morning. It won't injure beauty but neither will it reduce.

She dwells on her happiness, which she compares with that of the lark. How happy larks may be or why, I am not enough naturalist to surmise. If I have ever seen or heard a lark I was too dumb to recognize the bird. What makes her feel that way, perhaps, is this: "Women come to me for—baths to reduce. They think that's the way I lost my snacker flesh. I try to persuade them to walk, but it is no use, for they declare they get so exhausted when they try to walk. I just wish you could see some of the rolls and rolls, layers and layers of fat."

Walking is indeed hard work for the lazy fat ones. But that is because their muscles have been so long out of use. They must train for it. The way to do this is very simple. Let the lazy fat woman who yearns to come back even just a little way, arrange a schedule for herself and then demonstrate whether she has any grit, by sticking to the schedule and carrying it through to success. She should have two walks daily, or better three or four, but not less than two, one in the forenoon and one in the afternoon or evening. At first, if she is holder of long distance sitting championships, the walk should be only a few blocks. But every few days the number of blocks or the distance of the walk should be doubled. Some such gradually increasing course should be definitely scheduled and adhered to at all costs. In this way the laziest, flabbiest, weakest, puffiest bowl of fat can come back if she will.

Those who are only pleasantly, as it seems to me, plump, that is, lovely creatures who carry not to exceed 15 or 20 per cent excess baggage and still have enough ambition to suffer from that fat feeling (mental pain) whenever they encounter one of those dreadful skinny, slouching, bedizened human clothes.

Here and there, possibly a woman who would really like to walk back is in such an abject state of slavery that she can't get off to do it. All right, she can take the length of rope and go down in the basement or up in the attic, not to hang herself, but to skip back. Don't take my word for it. Listen to Mrs. G. W. L.: "Some time ago I wrote in the interest of a friend who had taken my suggestion to skip rope to reduce her weight. I thought such exercise entirely too vigorous for one over 40. Since we didn't hear from you we concluded you approved and she persisted with the rope skipping. Subsequently you said in your column that rope skipping is an excellent thing for weary hearts, so since I believe every little thing you say, I, too, have been jumping the rope (nearly 50 years old) and I find I breathe with more ease. But I have no flesh to lose, and I think I am losing a little. I do my rope jumping in the rear court in the open and feel a real exhilaration. I do about 600 jumps in 20 minutes after each 100 jumps. It has taken me about a month to get up to 600 jumps. Should I increase the dose? I am at splendid shape now. The rope skipping is delightful, but I do not care to lose my flesh. (H. W. L.)"

I should think 600 jumps in 20 minutes a fair day's ration. Mrs. H. W. L. will probably lose no more weight in rope skipping. This fine exercise will not reduce weight unless the skipper carries excess fat. Many flabby, weak, physically untrained persons who are unused to actual gain some needed weight by skipping the rope.

Skipping a hundred times would be equivalent to walking about half a mile. I should estimate. (*That's an old rope, Mrs. H. W. L. uses, but not exactly an antique.)

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Sapient Youth

I have been reading your column right along and was under the impression you were modern and half way sensible but you disappointed me tonight. You advised a mother to have her children inoculated against diphtheria. What lot! Whoever proved that serums prevented disease? I was vaccinated when going to school and the unhealthyness and graft involved in vaccination is an explanation and if I was capable of knowing then what I know now I would not be an innocent victim of such low graft. Snap out of it, Dr. Brady, and get some sense. (H. S. 18.)

Answer—Well, son, let's put all our cards on the table. Tell me where you learned about the unhealthyness and graft involved in vaccination and I think I can show you some graft and fakery in the source of your wisdom. Here's a curious thing: I was 20 years old before I realized the wisdom of being vaccinated, but then, my own vaccination didn't cost me anything (except a few days in bed) so nobody made any graft out of it.

THE UGLY DUCKLING

LIBRARY ADVENTURES

By Arnold Mulder

CARL SANDBURG THROUGH

REBECCA WEST'S EYES

The queerest thing imaginable has happened in the publishing world. Rebecca West has made a selection of Carl Sandburg's poems and has published them in a volume to which she has contributed an introduction giving her estimate of the Chicago poet. It is very much as if some 60 years ago George Eliot had published Walt Whitman.

It is understandable that the English novelist and litterateur should feel an impulse to bring some American poet to the attention of the English public and should do so by publishing a selection of his work. All the more so because Rebecca West has been traveling extensively in America and has soaked up a good deal of the American atmosphere.

WHY CHOOSE SANDBURG

But why Carl Sandburg? There are a number of American poets who are about as little known in England as . . . who are much nearer to the English tradition in poetry . . . Sandburg. Miss West herself suggests this when she says in her introduction: "In making this selection I have omitted nearly all his objective nature poetry, but I have included some of his more subjective poetry, and then she compares Sandburg's treatment of objective nature with that of Wordsworth and others."

The interesting fact about this volume therefore is not that it is made up of poems by Carl Sandburg but that it is made up of Sandburg poems selected by Rebecca West. It gives us an idea, not only of what Rebecca West's taste in present-day American poetry is but what is probably the taste of the present-day English reader in present-day American poetry. For Rebecca West is a fairly shrewd judge of her English audience. The selection is of interest more over in this section of America because Rebecca West seems to imply by it that the middle west really is America. Not the east with its publishing centers and its traditions of the "original females," but the middle west, the heart of the country industrially and agriculturally, the section of which Chicago is the symbol. It is the "hog butcher for the world," in Sandburg's phrase but it is here also that the real America has its fullest expression and it is that expression that Carl Sandburg has made articulate in his poetry. At least that seems to be Rebecca West's idea.

There is probably more in this than meets the eye. Recently a very cultivated person who knows something of both the European and American points of view asked me why some great novelist did not depict the inner life of America, the life that lies below the surface of the money-making, convention-going, conventionalized American. I've complained that the average European describes the Americans as more money-grubbers with no feeling for anything deeper and finer and he pointed out that even in pure cashmere there is much beneath the surface of American life that might put the Europeans to shame.

SANDBURG REVEALS SOME

For Rebecca West at least that is about what Carl Sandburg has done. He has taken America at its worst, as it might seem to the cultivated European, the hog-butcherer American, which phrase connotes a thousand things in a highly industrialized society, and he has revealed the soul underneath. A grimy soul it is sometimes, but then he has beauty there. Miss West: "Carl Sandburg uses everything he sees that looks to him a good subject: Mrs. Pietro Giovanni, the singing Nigger, the workmen who 'spill Poloponnasian syllables' as they sit in a Chicago lunch-room the the Hungarians with kegs of beer on the picnic grounds. He writes of the navy and the hoodlum, not from any 'open road' infantillism, but because they are at any rate men who withdraw themselves from the area of standardized living and thinking and who can look at reality with their own eyes."

It is interesting to know that a poet like Carl Sandburg can catch the attention of a novelist like Rebecca West. It will be still more interesting to see whether Englishmen in general will follow her example.

The Question Box

Q. What key in music is known as the pay key? T. B.

A. The Etude says that D major is frequently the joy key.

Q. How are airplane engines lubricated? H. L. P.

A. They are lubricated on what is known as the "dry sump" principle. Pumps of capacity greater than that of the oil supply pump, draw the oil from the crankcase and return it to an external tank. These pumps are so arranged as to prevent accumulation of the oil during any maneuver of the airplane except continuous up-side-down flight. The duration and frequency of up-side-down flight do not warrant the provision of special means for withdrawing the oil when in this position.

Q. Why does some popcorn fail to pop well? M. E. D.

A. It may be too dry and it may not be dry enough. If it is this year's corn it may not be dry enough. Keeping in a warm place for a week or two will improve it. If the corn is old, it is probably too dry. Putting it in a paper sack, on a sheltered porch where it will not get wet but absorb some moisture from the air, will help. Q. What material is the stickiest.

J. H. C.

A. Pine resin, at the right stage of hardening, is one of the stickiest material known.

Q. What are the freezing and boiling points of mercury? F. R. P.

A. Mercury freezes at 38 degrees below zero and boils or gives off gas at 35 degrees above zero, Fahrenheit.

Q. Whose idea was the Tournament of Roses in Pasadena? A. F. R.

A. The originator of the idea of the tournament was the late Prof. Chas. Frederick Holder. The first tournament was held January 1, 1890, and it has been held the 1st of January ever since.

New York—Now the birds of New York, by which I mean the real feathered kind, have their surgery, too.

For birds fall heir to ills like ours—they have their tumors, their sore throats, their broken legs, their dietary ailments. To the birds suffering these ills Miss Emilia Stencher is a friend, and her little hospital, in W. 64th street, a peaceful refuge.

In the hospital there is an operating room with its shining case of instruments. There are cushions, whereon the birds can lay their weary heads, and there are pleasant Spas where wounds can be washed. There is all the most fastidious bird could ask.

At the hospital you hear the story of the parrot who wouldn't talk. Dr. Stencher found that the bird had a tumor under the tongue.

Now Poll insists on telling everyone about "my operation."

The fire ladders partook of a parade the other day, when they were good to watch the 2000 men, with buttons aglow, marching along Fifth Avenue.

But memory of past parades is better. Somehow this was not like the ancient day of the "Abe," "John," "Barney" and "Bill," those dapper characters who would be tearing through the streets, rounding the corners at a breakneck pace. The spirit of such a parade in an older day seemed lacking. The heroic aspect of the old hook-and-ladder battalions was not there. Perhaps the horses took it with them when they went.

It has become the city of a million gate-crashers. The other day a maitred hotel told me that one hostess who had ordered a repast from him specified food for 500 guests, although but 300 persons had been invited to her party.

He told me, too, of the story a generous entertainer had related to him. She had arranged to have three quarts of wine from her pre-war cellar—at each table, the tables seating ten.

After the affair she was amazed at the amount of wine consumed and conducted a quiet investigation. Many of the summoned guests—and many of the unsummoned—had bribed the waiters to supply them with more wine, and not a few had gone away carrying quantities of it under their arms.

department at Washington? D. H. W.

A. A certified public accountant must be enrolled with the Treasury Department in order to practice before that department. In order to be enrolled he must file an application in duplicate setting forth the fee basis on which he handles the business in question. This fee basis must be in accordance with the specimen on page 13 of the circular 230. A number of public accountants take tax cases on a percentage basis as well as on a fee basis. The reason for the provision made by the department in regard to enrollment of accountants and their advocates is for consideration as to whether the percentage basis is a reasonable one.

Q. Is it possible for a Jewish student resident at Harvard University to gain "Kosher" food? A. D. T.

A. A Kosher cafeteria was recently opened at Harvard under the direction of the American Orthodox Congress in America. The late president emeritus Eliot in a recent address urged all students to stand by their religious views and to practice any dietary laws their religion might lay down.

Q. Is the Smithsonian Institution a government institution? W. E. D.

A. The Smithsonian is merely the guardian. Congress has never made any grant for the Smithsonian itself although from time to time it has recognized that various outgrowths of this institution have become public necessities and has appropriated money for their support. The Smithsonian finances its pioneering work in science from its private income.

Q. When was The Hoosier Schoolmaster published? N. A.

A. It was published in 1871 and enjoyed a great popularity for many years.

Q. Was Houcini, the handkerchief king, ever a flyer? M. S.

A. He was awarded a prize by the Australian Aeronautic League in 1910 as being the first successful flier in Australia.

Q. What kind of fur is sealine? W. W.

A. Sealine fur is clipped rabbit fur dyed black, and resembles seal.

Where can you safely find so much in an Overcoat at $40?

We cannot say anything about these coats that has not been said about a $60 proposition—but we can write about them as no $40 garment has ever been spoken of before.

Where can you see such style and needling at $40?

Where are such fabrics grouped at this price? Where in outer-garments has local currency ever had such an inside track?

Any way you look at it—these coats look $15 more—and it didn't take courage to make this last remark either.

Good Fellows Contribute $1,675.97 To City's Poor

The 1926 Good Fellows club closed Friday night with a total of $1,675.97 for Appleton Welfare council. This was approximately $700 less than was paid in 1925 and $800 less than in 1924.

The Welfare council sought $3,000 to carry on its work this year and the remainder of the money must be secured from other sources. But the welfare council and the cooperating societies are very grateful to the host of Appleton men, women and children who became Good Fellows this year by giving to help the poor.

Here is the final list of 1926 Good Fellows:

A Holiday Fantomime with fifty Appleton Junior stars will be presented by the J. F. Bannister Dancine Academy, tonight and Tuesday at Fischers Appleton theatre. The revue will be presented twice daily, once at the matinee at about 3:30 P. M. and once each evening at about 8:30 P. M. The feature photoplay shown in conjunction will be an adaptation of the famous play by Don Marquis, entitled "The Old Soak" featuring a cast headed by Jean Hersholt in the title role, supported by June Marlowe, Gertrude Astor, George Lewis, William V. Long, Louise Fazenda, Lucy Beaumont, and Tom Ricketts. Those who enjoyed W. C. Fields in "So's Your Old Man," and who didn't will find in Hersholt's characterization heart throbs lacking in the other photoplay of similar type, in addition to the humor. Jean Hersholt, while not enjoying the prestige of Dr. or the better known male stars, is one of the best character actors on the screen today, and many a photoplay starring better known actors, has been the richer for one of his rare and understanding portrayals.

SCREEN STORY

Romance and adventure, conflict and intrigue—they are the ingredients that tempt the imagination, they are story elements you love to see when you go to the movies. The most delightful combination of them is to be seen in the Fox Films production, "The Palace of Pleasure" at the New Bijou for three days starting today.

Here is a piece of screen entertainment that satisfies the interest of the spectator and shuts out the world of reality for more than an hour.

Edmund Lowe as a dashing royalist, Betty Compson as the beautiful Lola Montez, and Henry Kolker as a powerful Premier are the principals about whom the story revolves. The plot moves in a whirlwind of action that distinguishes it as a finely conceived story that has received excellent treatment at the hands of Director Emmett Flynn.

"The Palace of Pleasure" is thoroughly satisfying. Its strength of plot, its fine cast, and its unique background surprise any story of a similar type that has come to the attention of this critic for months. The New Bijou Theatre is indeed "The Palace of Pleasure" this week.

BISHOP MAY ATTEND
MEETINGS OF SOCIETY

Arrangements are being made to have Bishop Paul P. Rhode of the Green Bay diocese attend the annual meeting of the Holy Name society of St. Joseph church Sunday, Jan. 2. New officers of the society will be installed at that meeting and plans for the coming year will be discussed. More than 500 members of the society are expected to attend the meeting. Louis Schweizer is in charge of the dinner and the old officers are arranging the program.

THIS PROVES FARMING
ONE OF BIG INDUSTRIES

That farming is in reality one of the greatest industries of the United States was never more conclusively proved than through a recent census which shows that there are 6,250,000 parcels of land being worked. It was reported by County Agent Robert Amundson. The census, compiled by the secretary of agriculture, indicates that this figure includes only arable land.

NEW FASHIONS A PAGE OF INTEREST TO WOMEN BEAUTY HINTS

Woman's Attire Is Her Method Of Expressing Herself, Designers Do Not Rely On Own Inspirations For Christmas

BY HENRI BENDEL
NEW YORK—Every step upward or backward in woman's progress is bound to be registered in her attire.
It was not by accident that the women of the Victorian age wore bustles, hoopskirts, false curls and stupid little gawags, while the women of ancient Greece went about in classic draperies and the women of the French court demanded silks and satins of the richest hues and textures.
Women were merely expressing themselves then as they always have and always will. And their most honest expressions will always be their unconscious, effortless ones.
The Victorian woman did not realize what she was shouting to the world with her attire. And in fact, it didn't shout until after that era had passed.
So today it is not an accident that woman registers in her clothes her independence of thought and action, her wit and her ability to think in a straight line.

FEMININE TOUCH
After all, designers, customers, fabric makers and milliners only create in answer to woman's designs, not from their own instinct or inspiration. The unseen hand that shapes the mode is a feminine hand that knows what it wants.
And the most popular French couturiers are those who most subtly understand women's subtle intellect. Take, for instance, Vionnet, Chanel and Lanvin—all women, who have introduced into today's styles the intelligence without which there can be no real beauty.

What Vionnet and Chanel have contributed to beauty of line is inestimable. They have cleared up women's viewpoint sartorially. And Lanvin and ornamentation are not contradictory.

Illustrated today are three evening gowns of the sophisticated modern type, that are intelligent, beautiful and exceedingly logical. They presuppose a good figure, and a natural one. They make no attempt to disguise the natural lines or direct the emphasis. They are frank as well as charming. They are sane of themselves and quite unafraid.

They belong only to women who have these qualities themselves.

The model which you view from the back is one of the new colored velvet evening frocks which comes in green panne velvet. Down the back are long drapes which fall in straight uncomplicated lines from shoulder to ankle. On the right shoulder strap are green poppies in many shades. Shadow lace in that deep rich Chanel red forms the medallion with the butterfly wings. The pattern is outlined in good sequins which give it the delightfully gold-flecked quality of a butterfly and makes the draperies quite logical and appropriate. Here is a decided challenge to the obvious and ordinary, and an overtone of friendliness to the individual type of woman.

Chanel is also the creator of the third model which has a sheath of brocade chiton shirred into fan shapes at the side to form a cascade skirt of even length. The scalloped shawl of the material, with its deep silk fringe is the striking note of the costume.

The three represent the modern woman's triumph over sentimentality and the mere externals of clothes. Claiming their complete disregard of all tricks and obvious vanities, they proclaim their independence and their conformity to true art in dress.

HERE ARE THREE STRIKING IMPORTATIONS OF BENDEL'S. THEY ARE OF THE SOPHISTICATED MODERN TYPE, BEAUTIFUL AND EXTREMELY LOGICAL.

THE TINYMITES

By Hal Cochran

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE!

THE Tinymites clung to their sled. The wind made all the cheeks turn red, for surely they were traveling at many miles an hour. Said Scouty, "Say, it's nearing night." But Clowny snapped, "Oh, you're not right. The darkness merely comes from clouds. We're going to have a shower."
And as the sled sailed on its track the sky above got very black, and then some little snow flakes started falling all around. Then someone yelled, "I wish we'd stop before we slip and take a flop. If this keeps up the snow will be quite deep upon the ground."
Then Coppy said, "We're in no plight. I surely hope that you are right. No harm can come to us unless we slide into some pit. You ought to know, it seems to me, that snow's soft as it can be, and if we fall off of our sled it will not hurt one bit."
So, on they sailed through ice and snow, not knowing where the sled would go. They all agreed that coasting was great fun in winter weather. "Course now and then the wind gets cold, but shucks, the Tinymites were bold, and when it did they'd laugh, and huddle close together."
Said Scouty, when an hour had passed, "Say, just how long's this going to last? My legs are getting stiff and I would like to stretch them out. I wish that we could stop a bit. It's hard to sit, and sit, and sit." And then he heaved as he heard we Clowny shout:
"Hey, everybody! Look ahead! What's in the pathway of our sled?" And as they looked ahead they saw a great snow bank was there. And then, the next thing that they knew the sled arrived and ploughed right through, and all the little Tinymites went sailing in the air.
The Tinymites fish through the ice in the next story! (Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

HOW DID SHE DO IT?

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

THE woman had always been a mystery to me.
She was so completely without beauty that all her money and the combined efforts of Parisian dress makers and milliners could bring her under the next classification called "type" had failed. No, nobody could ever say that Mrs. X had "type" or even taste.
"I knew that she had had neither social prestige nor money before her marriage. Brainy she had, and an excellent education. But brains have never been considered a gift-edged security in the marriage market, and education—not here!"
Yet she had married, right off the train (for she came from a small town) the most eligible bachelor of the realm. He was a bit older than she, traveled, an alumnus in the school of culture, and a connoisseur in the world of women. Today, as head of a dozen different objective organizations that fill her time in an enviable ideal manner. Absolute success!
How had she done it?

Melt remaining butter in sauce pan, stir in flour and slowly add milk, stirring constantly, until thick and smooth. Remove from fire and add sifted parsnips. Household Hints

AVOID WASTE
Cornmeal and hominy spoil quickly, and consequently should be purchased in small quantities.

One day at a tea I found myself alone with her in an alcove where it was quiet—no guests, it could be in such a gable. I had time to observe before she turned to me, that the olive green velvet hat and crashing blue dress she wore gave her the color of a cooked artichoke. I fairly gasped.
She gave me a friendly smile, over her teacup then tilted her head slightly toward the crowded room. "I've been watching Gloria Green," she said as though she'd known me forever. "She's that plain little girl by the door. Just came out, you know, last week. I'd like to punch her mother."
"Who?" I smiled.
"The poor child's so homely," she said, "and her mother hasn't enough sense to tell her that nothing makes up for a plain face but personality and charm. She'll never get any where. I wish she was mine. I could make a wonder out of her."
The secret was out! And did I make a mental obeisance to Mrs. X? No! To her old mother back in the little town, I broadcast silently my congratulations.
"I've about decided that it doesn't matter what you look like if you have charm. And charm can get you anywhere. 'Good cat demonstration,' as they say in geometry."

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD CARRY A FLASK IN WINTER-- OH, NO! NOT CONTAINING GIN, BUT HAND LOTION

BY NINON
EVERY WOMAN'S handbag should contain a flask—not of gin or Scotch but of hand lotion. And she should use it just as conscientiously as she uses soap.
Keeping your hands beautiful in winter is much more of a chore than it is in the summer. In the first place, they require washing much more frequently on account of the large amount of coal smoke in the air. And constant washing is apt to produce chapping as well as cleanliness.
If you are careful about using a healing lotion after each washing and before exposure to the cold, and if you dust talcum lightly over your hands after each dose of lotion, it is highly probable that you can keep very respectable looking hands.
KEEP IT WITH YOU
But if your hands are particularly sensitive to changes in temperature, or if you have a tendency to an acid condition, you will need to give them greater care.
An excellent soap for tender hands is made by melting castile soap and adding a little olive oil when you get it to the liquid state. Keep this in a bottle and pour it on your hands instead of using the bar soap. It is very soothing and cleansing as well.
Or if you use regular soap you will find it advantageous to bathe the hands two or three times a week in warm olive oil and allow it to sink thoroughly into the skin. Besides making the texture soft and velvety, this will keep the cuticle at the base of the nails from becoming ragged and rough, and will make manicuring a simple matter.
Another way to keep your hands soft and pleasant to touch is by wearing gloves at night. After cleansing the hands, rub a good skin food well into the skin, or use any good hand lotion if you prefer, then draw on a pair of cheap cotton gloves—several sizes larger than you wear by day. Wash these out frequently so that they are perfectly sanitary.
While there are ever so many good hand lotions on the market which you can buy for a small sum, you can make an excellent one of equal parts of rose water and glycerine and a little lemon juice. If you add a few drops of carbolic acid to a bottle of rose water and glycerine, it will add to its efficiency.

Lemon juice is excellent for the hands, since it bleaches them and relieves that redness that is by no means attractive. Extremely red hands indicate faulty circulation or remedied by a local application. Some error in diet which cannot be Massaged is effective because it stimulates the flow of the blood.

After washing your hands in warm water, it is a good dash cold over them in order to accustom them to extreme changes of temperature.
Don't neglect your hands at any time, but particularly not in the winter when they resent it so frightfully and can mete out their revenge so successfully.

NEW MOTORING FASHIONS

Robinson Crusoe's influence is being felt in the new motoring fashions which include long overcoats, vests of gray goat fur, coming high up at the throat in the most approved Crusoe manner. The new fur coat-vest is not unlike an elongated waistcoat and reaches a few inches below the edge of the coat under which it is worn.

BUSTLES OF FLOWERS

British dressmakers are placing bustles on the new evening frocks. These recently seen were made entirely of flowers of varying realistic shades of mauve, pink and purple with black centers. They made an attractive decoration. Under the flower bustle, there hangs from the frock a mare's tail of pleated nylon. The new fashionable mare's tail is a sort of cross between a sash and a train. It reaches just below the bottom of the dress.

HIGH-COLLARED JUMPER

A very high-collared sleeveless jumper is being featured among the English winter styles. It is of black velvet richly adorned with hand-painted roses and a high collar buttoned to the ears and worn over a filmy skirt of finely pleated, black chiffon. Brightly colored buttons, brooches or arrows are used as fasteners.

SAINT AND SINNER

By Anne Austin

As Faith shrank helplessly against the wall, sick with the thought of facing the bridal party with her astounding news of Cherry's disappearance, a door to a tiny room adjoining the large vestry room opened and the rector, the Rev. Mr. Ashburn, appeared, vast and dignified in his rich vestments.

"I am Faith Lane, the sister of the bride," she came close and spoke in a voice so low that he stooped to listen. "There—there won't be any wedding, Mr. Ashburn. My sister—Cherry—Cherry has—" She could not go on in face of his blank astonishment.

"My dear young lady!" the rector refused to believe his ears. "You cannot possibly mean what you are saying! If you know of any reason why this marriage should not be performed, why did you not speak out sooner?"

"You misunderstood me," Faith whimpered, her lips quivering against her clenched right fist. "My sister has run away—just half an hour ago. She ran away to keep from marrying Mr. Cluny. Will you tell him?" She begged, laying a trembling hand on his sleeve.

"This is outrageous! Incredible!" The rector rose and flushed scarlet. "What in the world shall I say to my old friend, Ralph Cluny? I would rather face a cannon—" he seemed to forget Faith to be talking to himself. "Heaven knows I tried to dissuade him from the first. Madness, sinful madness, for age to seek to mate with youth—"

"Don't blame me," Faith was ashamed to feel tears gathering in her eyes. "She left a note, but I'd rather not show it to you. It's—it's so personal. She did not say where she was going. Please don't hope to try to find her or that she will come back," she pleaded.

"I don't know what to do," the rector looked about him helplessly. "It will cause a terrible scandal—nothing like this ever happened in my church before. How shall I tell Mr. Cluny? He is late—I wonder if she got word to him. But in that event he should have telephoned—"

The door was torn open and Bob Hathaway, his blue eyes fixed wide in a stare of horror, staggered into the room without an overcoat, the gleaming black of his evening clothes

WAISTCOATS OF FUR SUCCEED BROCADE COATS

Fur waistcoats and mittens for afternoon wear have appeared on McCaddilly and along Oxford Street. The mittens are made of supple short-lengthened fur. On chilly days the waistcoat is slipped over velvet frocks. Women are wearing the fur waistcoats to afternoon bridge parties instead of brocade coats. The waistcoats are made sometimes from inexpensive ermine-dyed rabbit; gain from mole-skin.

VARIATION IN ETON CROP
One of the variations of the Eton crop this season is to have a lock of hair drawn from the back underneath the ear. It is not easy to train these back locks to lie perfectly flat, even with the aid of brilliantine, so the English miss has brought out some original earrings to help. Now the rebellious locks are passed through a ring small enough to hold it firmly.

TRAFFIC PROBLEM COSTLY TO STATES

New York and New Jersey Will Spend $200,000,000 Before 1933

New York—Nearly $200,000,000 will have been spent before 1933 by New York and New Jersey for perhaps the most ambitious program of traffic relief in the country. The program includes:

1—The $40,000,000 twin tunnel system for vehicles under the Hudson, already completed and soon to be in operation.

2—Two express highways of the "super" variety, costing about $73,000,000.

3—A bridge from New Jersey to Staten Island, $15,000,000.

4—A high suspension bridge across the Hudson at Fort Lee, $75,000,000.

When the Hudson vehicular tunnels are opened the first part of 1927, present congestion at ferry points will be relieved and traffic speeded up considerably.

At the terminals of this tunnel, however, police will have to cope with a concentration of the difficulties that were scattered among the ferry points. To avoid this, therefore, New York City is planning an elevated super-highway running from the Manhattan terminal of the tunnel of the Hudson coast to meet Riverside drive, at 72d street.

Construction of this road will cost $35,000,000 it is estimated and could be completed in from two to three years. It would not only speed up traffic from the down town area, but relieve narrow streets now hopelessly congested.

On the New Jersey side construction already has begun on the partly elevated boulevard extending 18 miles to Elizabeth, with a tunnel part way through the Palisades at the beginning of the route. This express highway will cost about $40,000,000.

"Your repair bills commence when you start a cold-stiffened motor. Everyone who hears the carburetor coughing, more thru instinct than thru reasoning, pulls the choke. Then the trouble begins, for every time you pull the choke you flood your motor with raw gasoline which washes the film of oil from your cylinder walls and runs down to dilute the lubricating oil. Result: the scoring of cylinders and pitting of pistons."...This expert's advice is employed here in Slants because it is truth in advertising De Bauffer Tested Gasoline...We have told you that DeBauffer Hi Test lessens the choke operation, not a little, but a great deal...We tell you now that DeBauffer Hi Test protects you against repair bills occasioned from starting a cold motor...We can prove that DeBauffer's lessens the choke operation and when we can do that we leave it up to you—isn't it worth more than low test?...DeBauffer's is a high test winter gasoline that starts your day right...In fairness to your motor—use it!

WAREHOUSE, HOME ARE DESTROYED BY FIRES IN COUNTY

Weyauwega and Bear Creek
Village Are Scenes of Fire
Over Weekend

Although Appleton boasted a perfect fire record over the weekend, this was not the case in the surrounding community. Two fires, both of a rather serious nature, were reported, one at Weyauwega and the other Bear Creek.

The warehouse of the Peterson Produce Co. at Weyauwega was totally destroyed at 6:30 Friday evening when fire, believed to have originated from an overheated stove, gained a big start before discovered. Approximately 2,000 bushels of potatoes in the building were destroyed.

The blaze was discovered by motorists, who turned in the alarm, but by the time the volunteer fire department arrived the structure was beyond saving. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

A vacant residence owned by Herman Affeld of Weyauwega and located at Bear Creek village was almost entirely destroyed shortly before noon Friday morning. Mr. Affeld had gone to Bear Creek in the morning to complete some repairs on the building in order to make it ready for occupancy within a few days. He had rented the building only a week or so ago.

A small stove in which he had started a fire to remove the chill from the building is believed to have overheated while he was absent during the noon hour, and when he returned he found the inside swept with flames. The fire department responded at once to the alarm, but the flames were not extinguished until after much damage had been done.

A small insurance was carried by the owner.

PROSPERITY WILL CONTINUE, FORECAST

deflation caused by war and great shifts of gold on a scale heretofore unheard of. Gradually the effects of the war are clearing away, and banking conditions the world over are getting back more nearly to normal.

Concern has been expressed in some quarters over the present large holdings of banks of securities and collateral loans which are ineligible for rediscount or pledge at the Reserve banks. The expansion of these holdings in recent years has been largely the result of the fact that imports have caused supplies of funds to increase faster than they could be absorbed in the ordinary commercial channels, so that banks have had no other alternative than their employment in the security markets.

The problem of maintaining liquidity should engage the attention of all bankers, but there is no evidence that the banking position thus far has been impaired. If we do not get any more gold the savings of the country will gradually absorb this large floating supply of securities.

W. C. Teale, President, Standard Oil Company, N. J.—With a prosperity that was nicely timed, Nature released a fresh flood of new crude oil production last summer, and we have been convinced that we are practically at the end of our oil resources. There is no major business activity so hard to forecast as crude production. No sooner do experts complete their charts and commit themselves to a prediction than the market is sure to break loose with a lot of oil. In the past year there was good reason in the early months to look for a substantial decrease for the twelve months period compared with 1925.

The first six months loss amounted to 2,000,000 barrels. It appears that not only has the deficiency of the first half year been overcome by increased production in later months, but it is a practical certainty that the total yield for the full year 1926 will exceed that for 1925 by a substantial amount and in so doing establish a new high record for the United States, above 765,000,000 barrels. The industry is steadily progressing in its efforts to increase the amount of gasoline obtained from each barrel of crude. To date this year the average gasoline yield has been 35 per cent, an increase of 1.2 per cent over the average for 1925. This is mainly accounted for by the rapid spread of cracking processes. In the first nine months of the year there was produced in the country's refineries by cracking a total of 64,700,000 barrels of gasoline against 59,140,000 for the corresponding period of 1925. The actual increase in gasoline obtained by cracking was therefore more than 29 per cent. "This, to my mind, is at once both the significant and the more reassuring single factor in the problem of the adequacy of petroleum supplies to meet the increased demand of the future."

By Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the Board of Directors, Bethlehem Steel Corporation—At no time in history have the people of an entire nation enjoyed the prosperity prevalent in the United States today. At no time have people dreamed of the universal use of luxuries which we accept as our birthright. Our material prosperity is astounding, so remarkable in fact that business men are coming from all parts of the world to study our methods. We still have many problems before us. Our very prosperity makes foreign manufacturers cast envious eyes at our markets. To maintain our markets and our present high wages with reasonable profits for manufacturers we must realize efficiency and economies upon a progressive scale, not merely in production but in marketing methods as well. Both in industry and in agriculture there must be cooperation among the factors involved to an extent never before considered necessary or even desirable. Farming must be conceived on a more scientific basis. There must be greater integration of agricultural producing units. We must apply to our fields the methods of large production which have been found successful in our factories. Waste in marketing must be minimized on the farm as well as in industry.

"These things can and will be done through the cooperation of heads of industries, farmers, bankers, Wall Street men and ranchers. We have the greatest country in the world and with intelligent effort, a feeling of humility and with faith in one another nothing is beyond the power of achievement."

By John Zukor, President, "Famous Players Lasky Corporation"—This country is in good economic condition, and in 1927 I think its prosperity will be on an even sounder basis than ever before.

"The reason for this, to my mind, is a change in the attitude of the business concerns and in individuals themselves. During the war and in the years that have followed, the United States went through a period of unprecedented activity. People were making money fast and spending it at the same pace.

"In the last two years, however, particularly in the year now ending, we have been husbanding our resources, we have become more conservative. This applies not only to industrial and commercial enterprises; it is also true of our citizens. They are saving more, and when they spend money, they do so more intelligently; they demand greater value in return. Business is using more care and foresight in its expansions. It is watching its fire commitments with a more jealous eye. In other words, it is consolidating its position with the thought of holding on to the gains it has made. To me, this augurs well for the continued prosperity of the country, and 1927, I think, will see us all on a better footing than ever before."

By Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors Corporation—There is no reason to expect that 1927 will be another good year for the automobile industry—perhaps not so good as 1926, but a satisfactory year. It must be borne in mind that 1926 had exceeded any previous year

DEATHS

Russel Rule, 46, brother of Mayor Albert C. Rule, died at 8 o'clock Monday evening following a four days' illness from pneumonia. He was born in Greenland, Mich., and came to Appleton when he was nine years of age. He attended the Fourth ward school. In 1908 he moved to Kaukauna where he lived for six years, returning to this city in 1914.

He is survived by three brothers, Mayor Albert C. Rule, Clinton and Vernon of Appleton.

Funeral services are to be held at 2:30 Tuesday afternoon from the Conn Funeral home with Dr. H. E. Peabody, pastor of First Congregational church, in charge. Interment will be made in Riverside cemetery. The body will lie in state at the Conn Funeral home.

Frank Winkler, 55, died at his home at Chilton, Wis., Monday evening following a long illness. Mr. Winkler had been ill for the past month, although his health had not been robust for the past two years. He was born in Lindewee, Germany on Dec. 28, 1871. In June, 1896 he came to America with his parents, who lived in Stockbridge. On Oct. 25, 1891 he enlisted in Co. K, 9th Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and he served in the war until Dec. 3, 1894.

On Oct. 28, 1896 he was married to Miss Paulina Freusser, also of Stockbridge, and the young couple moved on a farm in the town of Stockbridge. In 1903 they moved to Chilton.

He is survived by his widow, one son Frank Jr. and by seven grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at St. Mary church at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. Burial will be in St. Mary cemetery.

In the volume of automobile production and sales that domestic consumer demand has broken all records and that export business has been the largest in history. During this year something over 4,500,000 passenger cars, trucks and buses were produced in the United States and Canada, or some 9 to 7 per cent more than in the previous record year of 1925. Indeed, the past four years have been a period of very satisfactory automobile volume, the total output of the industry in the United States and Canada in these four years having been about 16,500,000 vehicles, or an average of approximately 4 1/4 million a year. CONGRESS MAY BAR FIREARMS FROM ALL MAILS OF COUNTRY

Act Would Stop Practice of Putting Guns in Hands of Gunmen

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington—Some day soon your Uncle Samuel may stop putting guns in the hands of gunmen who shoot up his peaceful citizens.

An act which will bar pistols and revolvers from the United States mails is likely to pass in the Senate. It was passed unanimously by the House last year and Senator Lawrence C. Phillips of the Senate committee on postoffice and roads, who is now foster-fathering it, expects it to pass before the 68th Congress expires.

The proposed law has received the enthusiastic backing of the Post-office Department and of jurists and law enforcement officials throughout the land, who declare that the great majority of bandits now are armed with a horde of mail orders and checks. Congressmen John F. Miller of Seattle, Wash., wrote and introduced the bill. He came into contact with the "one-hand gun" situation years ago, first as a prosecuting attorney and later as mayor of Seattle. He introduced his bill in the 67th Congress. It passed the House in the 68th and died in the Senate. He brought it again into the 68th Congress and now soon expects it to be made law.

Nearly every large city, Miller pointed out in explaining the purpose of the bill, regulates the sale of firearms—apartments and presentations of good persons generally must precede local purchases.

"But anybody can write to a mail order house and receive firearms through the mail," he said. And every crook and thug in the country has adopted this method.

"The biggest mail order houses have abandoned the practice of selling revolvers by mail, but the smaller and less scrupulous concerns are legion, and many of them specialize in firearms."

"Heaven only knows how many thousands of guns are sent through the mails," said Congressman Miller. "We know that thousands are delivered in single cities."

"The first thing thugs and holdups do is get rid of their guns. Then they send a rush requisition to some mail order house for more."

The only opposition to the proposed law which Miller has heard of comes from isolated sections in the far west which are remote from dealers in firearms and which have always depended on the mails for their supplies.

That of the law will be heard from in the Senate, although the bill is on the unanimous consent calendar.

Miller doesn't predict that the law will end crime, but he holds it will help.

"War always brings on crime in its wake," he says. "An era of crime followed the Civil war. In time our crime wave probably will die down, but those of us who are living in the present might as well do all we can right now to help it subside."

QUARTZ CRYSTALS WOULD ALLOW MORE RADIO STATIONS

Number of Broadcasters
Could Be Doubled, Experts
Maintains

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Radio Editor, NEA Service
There would be room for double the present number of broadcasters if every station in the country controlled its transmission by means of a thin little square of quartz crystal.

Some of the larger radio stations of the country already have incorporated this glass-like substance in their apparatus. The effect of its use has been to keep a station's wavelength from fluctuating and so maintain the exact frequency to which it is assigned.

Before the use of the quartz crystal, wavelengths had to be assigned with an allowance for fluctuations of five kilocycles each way. Some of the stations may be discovered farther off their wavelengths than the permissible five kilocycles.

The quartz crystal has been found to control this. And more, it has been looked upon as a possible way out of the broadcasting jam today.

INVENTOR SEES POSSIBILITY
Prof. Walter G. Cady of Wesleyan University, inventor of the quartz crystal control for radio transmission, sees just this possibility.

"The old 10-kilocycle differential makes allowance for fluctuations," he says. "The crystal control method virtually eliminates fluctuations. Universal use of it would make more room in the air."

"How much of a reduction in the differential would be possible is a matter for experience to determine."

But it is considered generally that a reduction to five kilocycles isn't any too great. This alone would take care of nearly all those applying for broadcasting stations today.

TWO USES FOR CRYSTAL
The crystal acts as a resonator and as a stabilizer. As a resonator it is adjusted to a definite frequency and vibrates at that frequency only. Thus it serves as a frequency standard.

As a stabilizer the crystal holds the frequency of the station steady, like the pendulum of a clock.

In addition to steady control, stations KDKA and WGY, which have been using the crystal, have found it produces less fading of signals.

For the broadcasting wavelengths the quartz crystal is an average of an inch square by an eighth of an inch in thickness changes it to a different wavelength.

STATE SECRETARY ISSUES NEW MOTOR "STRIPS" TO CITY

Cards Make for Efficiency in Issuance of License, Say
Officials

Appleton and Outagamie-co. automobile owners are receiving their set of motor "strips" from the office of the secretary of state which are to be returned to Madison together with the fee and the certificate of title issued by the secretary a year ago.

The "strips" are completely made out with the name of the owner of the car and complete description of the machine which was licensed a year ago. These cards make for efficiency in the issuance of licenses and in keeping the necessary records of the office at Madison and at police headquarters in this city.

When a license is issued just one operation completes the various cards. One is kept at Madison for the records of the secretary of state's office; another is immediately sent to the police department of the city in which the car is located; another is filed in the county records and another in city records while one is returned to the automobile owner as proof of registration.

By this means it will be possible for the secretary of state to show at any time just how many cars are owned by residents of the City of Fond du Lac and how many are owned in the entire county.

With automobile owners subject to various forms of taxation, including license, gas tax, no personal property taxes, these records may play an important part in the work of the next legislature, particularly in view of the fact that a determined effort may be

GEOLOGISTS OF U. S. CONVENE AT MADISON

Madison, Wis., (AP)—The doings of Mother Nature and Father Time in forming and hardening the earth will be discussed here by geologists from the United States and other countries who were arriving today for the thirty-ninth annual meeting of the Geological society of America and allied societies.

It was expected that more than 300 geologists including 60 graduates of the University of Wisconsin will be present at the opening of the scientific sessions Tuesday.

The Wisconsin graduates were to be guests of the University geology department at a banquet here this evening. Prominent among the scientists who will appear on the program was Dr. T. C. Chamberlain, former president of the university and head of the Wisconsin geological survey.

Dr. Chamberlain is now connected with the University of Chicago. The society has not held a meeting as far west as Madison for many years.

made to lift the personal property tax from autos, while another attempt will be made to obtain for the city and county a larger portion of the gas tax because of the large number of automobiles owned there.

The use of these cards by the work of issuing the license, and in keeping the records at Madison, according to the secretary of state. If lost, however, the department will make out a new set.

FIREMEN SPEND QUIET PERIOD OVER HOLIDAYS

Although bells announcing the celebration of the birth of the Christ child pealed forth resonantly over the weekend, not as much as the stroke of a gong interrupted the stillness at the fire department building. Truly was it a period of joy and rest for the fire fighters, which most certainly was as it should be.

Christmas, being a time for celebration and rest, is not always observed in such a manner by members of the department. To the contrary, fires are usually more or less numerous during the holidays, and instead of enjoying Christmas as most folks do, the firemen are busily engaged in extinguishing flames and protecting property in a temperature which of late has been around the zero mark.

For a change this was a real Christmas for the firemen in the literal sense of the word.

THE NAME TELLS A TRUE STORY

The very name, Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, tells why, without opiates or chloroform, it is so quickly effective in stopping coughs and in healing the distressing cause. Because it alone combines the curative virtues of pure Pine Tar and other healing ingredients, together with the mollifying demulcent effects of clear fresh Honey. From 551 E. 46th St., Chicago, comes this: "A stubborn cough worried me, kept me awake nights, and resisted other cough medicines, but quickly yielded to your good Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. My druggist recommended it." Ask for it. Sold everywhere.

Weather And Industries Fix Water Consumption

Appleton consumes considerably less water in winter than in summer, but the consumption does not vary in proportion to the extremities of the weather alone, according to Arthur J. Hall, superintendent Appleton Water Works.

Many factors other than temperature have a direct bearing on the volume of water used by the city, one of the principal ones being industrial establishments, he pointed out.

To show that cold weather does not necessarily mean a decrease in the demand for water, Mr. Hall reports that the average daily consumption so far this month is 1,700,000 gallons, while on Dec. 14, one of the coldest days experienced so far this year, the consumption was 1,530,000 gallons.

Warm weather of course caused an increase in the demand, the average daily consumption last July being 1,850,000 gallons and 1,621,000 gallons the preceding month. The highest daily consumption was recorded last July 23 when 2,450,000 gallons were used by the city.

The consumption of one day is apt to vary more than 100,000 gallons from the day before or day after, although the temperature may be practically the same, according to Mr. Hall. The difference may be accounted for by the extra demand of only one factory.

Water consumption does not necessarily drop because a day is colder than usual; in fact the contrary often is true, he indicated. On extremely cold days some persons allow water to run out of their faucets for hours at a time to prevent freezing.

Finish Home
The roof is being completed on the new home for the locktender at the Cedars lock at Kimberly. The house is being built at a cost of approximately $8,000 by Albert Luckow of Kaukauna. The building will be finished some time in February, according to E. F. Everett, United States engineer.

50 DEER SHIPPED TO CITY BY TRAIN

Many Hunters Bring Quarry
Home in Cars, Express
Man Reports

Between 40 and 50 deer were shipped into Appleton by hunters during the past season via the American Railway Express company, according to W. N. Kimball, local agent. This number is smaller than other years, according to Mr. Kimball, because most hunters made their trips to the hunting grounds with automobiles or trucks. It was estimated by several local hunters that between 100 and 150 deer were brought into Appleton via automobile and that perhaps 500 more passed through the city to the southern part of the state.

The law that the shipper of a deer must accompany the body on its trip to its destination reduced the number of deer shipped by express. Kimball believes. In many cases four or five hunters would travel in one car and the expenses of the trip would be greatly reduced. The spoils, if any, could be returned on the running board or in a trailer, and thus the expense of shipping would be avoided.
